

In a million words or less...

Welcome to 5th grade parents!

Some of you may already be PV veterans having older children lucky enough to have had Mr. Pakkala or Mr. Hiedeman. For some of you it's your first go around at 5th grade, Ms. Strack's too and my second!

I want to thank those of you that were able to make it to open house last Wednesday. It's a huge time commitment and I understand if you could not make it but I look forward to meeting you very soon! We may not directly spend a lot of time together this year but through our blog and your child, I hope to keep the communication lines wide open.

Your child will definitely be putting in their fair share of work this year, so I would like to extend the first homework assignment of the year, to YOU! Using the blank sheet of paper attached, please tell me about your child in a million words or less! This is your chance to brag, tell me their interest, glasses?, allergies, dislikes, what works and doesn't work, and about your lives. After all, you do know them best! This will help me to better understand your child and how I can better assist them throughout the year. Be creative and have fun! PLEASE RETURN BY FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th.

You may also email or share a document via Google with me, Justin.schiffler@isd47.org Please put "in a million words of less" in the subject line. The assignment can also be found on our blog: www.mrschiffler.weebly.com under the "Parent Resource" tab.

THE PAPER IS FOR MY EYES ONLY...NOBODY ELSE WILL SEE OR READ IT!

Thank you in advance for being a positive role model and being a solid support system for them as they transition into the new school year!

Mr. Schiffler
